of silver coin greatly exceeds any similar loss by any other institution in the city. Much of the silver and small change in circulation finds its way into the coffers of the street railway company during the menth, and at the time of the fire the United Railroads had many thousands of dollars in silver dollars, halves, quarters, dimes and nickels in the safes of Treasurer Starr, on the eighth floor of the Rialto Building. All the gold coin in the Treasurer's office, contained in a separate safe, escaped unbarried, but the silver is unrecognizable.

It consists of a small trucklead of bisckened masses of metal of freegular shape. Various metals are fused in the metest masses of coin, so that the company will probably be put to the expense of having them meted and refined. Treasure says that silver, nickel, copper and from in unknown quantifies are present in the bi-links of metal, the copper coming from a coxes in which the rolls of coin were
